Guidance

Can I appeal about the decision to discontinue in relation to my complaint?

An appeal can be made against a decision to discontinue. Discontinue means stopping the complaints process once an investigation begins.

You can appeal if:

- your complaint was about the conduct of a police officer or member of police staff
- you do not think the police should have decided to discontinue.

However, you cannot appeal when the complaint relates to a direction and control issue. Direction and control means the overall policies of a police force, for example police resources and policing standards.
